Payments to Agents

19 Feb 1955

Palmira

Capital Field in 15-63-224

1. Headquarters records reveal that dollar payments to allottees in the United States are being made for the following agents used by your station:

FULWILER	$125 per month
FULECK	$100 " "
FUMILATE	$ 50 " "
FUMILATE-1	$ 50 " "

2. This process has become so cumbersome in view of world-wide requirements, that it has become necessary to ask field stations to make salary payments locally, either in dollars or local currency, whenever possible. Please advise by return pouch whether it will be possible to make the above listed payments locally.

3. It is further requested that you clarify the status of FULWILER, FUMILATE-1, and FUMILATE-2. The most recent exchange of cables (SACD-160 and WASH-27940) left headquarters with the impression that the entire FULWILER project was about to be discontinued, in which case, it is recommended, dollar payments for FULWILER and FUMILATE-1 should be discontinued. Please advise by pouch.

Payments to agents; FULINPART Project

Reference: TCG-W-1162

1. Pending preparation of a chronological review of the recent developments of the FULINPART Project since submission of TCG-W-1237, Headquarters is advised that this Station desires the termination of payments to FULINPART and FULINPART-1 as of 23 February 1951 and that no payments be made for the month of March 1951 or henceforth until further notice.
2. Due to the anticipation of an early termination of this project and the absence of any further need for the FULINPART Safe Department, this Station has allowed its control on same to lapse as of 10 March 1951.
3. It is anticipated that the abovementioned review will be ready for submission to Headquarters in the next available month. Meanwhile for Headquarters information the control over FULINPART has passed to FULINPAR who will handle the project's initiation and deportation as early as practicable.

Payments to agents; FULLERTON Project

Reference: TCS-W-1182

1. Pending preparation of a chronological review of the recent developments of the FULLERTON Project since submission of TCS-A-1267, Headquarters is advised that this Station desires the termination of payments to FULLERTON and FULLERTON-1 as of 28 February 1961 and that no payments be made for the month of March 1961 or hereafter until further notice.
2. Due to the anticipation of an early termination of this project and the absence of any further need for the FULLERTON safe department, this Station has allowed its control over same to lapse as of 10 March 1961.
3. It is anticipated that the abovementioned review will be ready for submission to Headquarters in the next available pouch. Meanwhile for Headquarters information the control over FULLERTON-2 has passed to FULLERTON who will handle the carrier's debriefing and deportation as early as practicable.

MILESTONE

A most important gentleman had an unusually important day this week. Charles Philip Arthur George, son of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, and England's future King, became three.

It was a happy day all round. For not only did Bonny Prince Charles enjoy to full measure the usual delirium of the small boy's birthday, but the King felt fit enough to attend the party and invite a Press photographer.

The King's rapid recovery to the point where he can walk unaided and move with no apparent strain has astonished and delighted the nation. The TIMES photographer - the first member of the public to see him since his operation - reported in some amazement that the King showed no sign of illness, laughed and chatted happily and seemed altogether out of character for a man so recently at grips with major surgery.

The Prince's birthday began, as always. Still, he seems happy every such day should, with eager enough as his nanny pushes the opening of many parcels. He was pram between admiring strollers, then taken for his usual outing in followed by bulky men stamping St. James's Park - that delightful Sealand Yard all over. He's a playground that he can never fully friendly child with a democratic enjoy. For, as a royal prince he tendency to talk and ware to must not sail boats in public ponds everybody as he clutches two or feed ducks, or ride on the grubby lead soldiers. It's a firm have the upshot.

On his third birthday, he showed many of the qualities of gaiety, mirthlessness, and downright composure that the world need so much. He spends much of his time with a tutu and is well past the baby-toddler stage. He is bright, interested in everything and very obviously no easy. He has had to learn to bear long absences from his parents and conduct himself with dignity in public. London, the world's most critical judge of royalty, awards him top marks all round in its third Report on Progress, and heartily wishes him very many happy returns.

TRAP

Londoners face a new hazard, another pit in the treacherous dog of regulations that surrounds today's law-respecting citizens.

This week, careful sidestepers along the narrow pathways of rectitude learned that the phone may lead to a fine.

In our public telephone boxes are two buttons: after the money has clicked into the box and some sort of response been evoked the caller presses Button A so that the other end can hear him. If he gets the wrong number or none at all he presses Button B and gets his money back, usually. Sometimes, the mechanism appears to develop an unusual contrition in its behaviour and pours out a shower of coins wildly in excess of the Button B presser's due. Till now, this pleasant quirk has invested the dull business of telephoning with a certain sporting quality. No call is complete without a hopeful lunge at Button B.

The other day, it seems, a youth trying to phone his girl-friend was getting no reply, which is trouble enough, anyway. Pressing Button B, he was rewarded with eightpence, five more than he was entitled to. If there's one soul in the whole of London's ten million who wouldn't have pocketed that extra fivepence it certainly wasn't our young swain. Unfortunately, somebody spotted his transaction and the lad eventually found himself in court as wrong as anyone ever got.

They fined him ten shillings, saying that he should have returned the other fivepence to the box or a post-office. The authorities explain that people who forget to press Button B to regain their money claim on the Post Office and, therefore, anyone pocketing money thus hurled at them is robbing the Postmaster General. There may possibly be people who claim for the odd forgotten threepence, but this column has never met even a remote friend of one.

So something of the sport has gone out of life. And a lot of people are congratulating themselves on a narrow escape from disgrace. There, but for the grace of God. The lad seems to have had less than a generous deal from Fate. London hopes he at least enjoyed the consolation of a plausible explanation by his girl-friend.

HOPES

Among the more frightening visions floating in the mind's eye just now is one of cohorts of plump ladies standing purposefully on their heads. For somebody has discovered that this unedifying exercise produces a reduction in weight.

B Main's amateur bantam-weight boxing champion had a spot of business up at Wembley this week which necessitated his clocking a overweight so he took a hot bath and jogged about a bit and had another shot. No matron ever registered more disappointment on a weighing machine - he was still overweight. A bystander, who might have been a ditch-doctor but who was a more than ordinarily knowledgeable gymnast, suggested the dejected bantam-weight should stand on his head. Surprisingly, instead of giving the know-all a clip on the ear for ill-timed levity, the boxer did as he was told. They weighed him again and he had lost the surplus six ounces. The story ends happily enough, as he TAILS END won his fight a few hours later.

Now, there's another fight in progress between the "experts." Some doctors refused to believe it, like the man who first saw the giraffe. Others say that standing on the head couldn't have had any effect; it was something else. From Harley Street comes the theory that being upside down disturbs a body's air content and sends some of it higher; this results in a temporary loss of weight. But this isn't among light fantastic we hear about?

FRANCE IN MOROCCO

HERE has always been discussion about the peculiar trait of human nature which finds expression in a feeling of pleasure in contemplating the misfortunes of others. The great Lucretius in his poem "De rerum natura" tells of the satisfaction enjoyed in witnessing, from the safety of the shore, the shipwrecked mariners struggling in the sea; but he does not seem to have found anything reprehensible in the sentiment. Nowadays we should, of course, indignantly deny any such baseness in ourselves, though we may not be so sure about "the other fellow" who is quite capable of putting a banana—skin on the path for our special benefit. However this may be, it cannot be ignored that the "foreign" press tends to glaze over the difficulties of Great Britain, formerly in India and Palestine, now in Iran and Egypt, conveniently forgetting the fact that no country in the world with international responsibilities can hope, in present world circumstances, to evade situations dangerous to national prestige.

Just twenty years—no more—have passed since a magnificent "Exposition Coloniale" was held in the Parisian suburb Vincennes, which attracted visitors from all parts of the world and was proudly pointed to in many countries as being convincing evidence that the great nations of Europe, and the United States with them were in no way disposed to accept the concept of "the twilight of the West" or to renounce their "mission civilisatrice".

How stands that Colonial Empire today? It has to be remembered that France, as a colonial power had a great asset shared by no other Western nation—the absence of a rigid colour bar. The extending to "native" peoples of the full rights of French citizenship went beyond legal formulae; mixed unions are not frowned on and "a touch of the tar brush"—or of yellow paint in the Far East, conveys no stigma, whatever other handicaps may have to be overcome. Moreover, colonial France has called forth the energy, and in not a few cases, the genius of great soldiers and administrators, second to none, and whatever may happen in the future their place in history is secure. Nevertheless, though the tricolour still flies over many lands and over millions of many races, all of them, potentially if not actually, overseas Frenchmen, the wave of nationalism rising to full tide after the disasters of the second world war has swept away many landmarks that seemed to have their foundations firmly based in tradition. Syria and Lebanon, with their great French Crusader castles, specking still of warriors and heroes of the past who left their giant bones from Antioch to the Gulf of Aqaba and beyond-all gone. On Indo-China and Annam, Tonquin and Madagascar, we see French dominion fighting there for very life, and fate hangs daily in the balance. Now the interest and anxiety concentrates on Morocco, a question that really concerns all French Africa, north and central.

In Morocco the position is peculiar. Less than fifty years ago, though so near Europe, Morocco was very little known and foreigners were not welcomed there. The mutual jealousies of European powers helped to perpetuate this situation until it became intolerable, and in return for the usual shady agreements not to interfere with the ambitions of others elsewhere, France was given a free hand to go ahead. By 1912, it was possible to speak of "pacification," and since that date, with a shadowy native ruler in nominally supreme authority, the civilizing of Morocco had gone far enough by 1913 for that country to have its "pavilion" in the Exhibition. But under the surface nationalism fermented, raising difficulties for the Sultan as well as for French military and civil authorities. These difficulties have now become acute, and have been raised in the United Nations by the representative of Iraq, in one that led the French representative to leave the Mandate Commission during two hours. It is not only Great Britain, nor has to struggle with problems in the Mediterranean area!

CIGARETTES

Last week's pin-up was certainly amongst your best—but tell me who writes the captions for the photographs? I presume you import them but do you adhere to the original description. I always have an uncomfortable feeling that my leg is being pulled yet I should not be so bold as to say that you tamper with the text. However, I find it more than difficult to believe that a girl with a name like Daphne Codd should be selected by the International Pearl Divers' Association (A.F.L.) as the "GIRL WITH WHOM WE WOULD LIKE TO SHUCK OYSTERS" but stood as a candidate for the title "MISS BEACH-MINDED 1951". In which contest she failed to place. This fact was, therefore, omitted in order not to unnecessarily strain readers' doubts. Finally to the best of the editors' knowledge there is an International Pearl Divers' Association and Mr. Murray (president of the A. F. L.) would assuredly welcome them to the A. F. L.

The captions for S. P. M. pictures are invariably rewritten by the staff not, however, to stretch credulity but to fill space. Miss Daphne Codd was not only selected by the International Pearl Divers' Association as the "GIRL WITH WHOM WE WOULD LIKE TO SHUCK OYSTERS" but stood as a candidate for the title "MISS BEACH-MINDED 1951". KOREAN CEASE FIRE LINE RATIFIED IN PLENARY SESSION: CESSATION OF LAND FIGHTING REPORTED

Into the chilly, rain-soaked, roadside tent at Panmunjom this week went a gust of accord. United Nations and Communist delegates set a thirty day deadline for concluding a truce as they, at the same time, came to an agreement on the second item of the peace agenda—the location of the cease fire line.

Agreement came just five months to the day after Soviet Deputy to the United Nations, Jacob A. Malik, proposed that both sides open negotiations for a cessation of hostilities based on the thirty-eighth Parallel.

In those five, weary, bloody months proposal after ill-fated proposal failed the negative air of Communist obduracy and U. N. insistence. Meanwhile, the fighting had gone on, savage and costly. And ridge by dreary ridge had fallen, taking their toll of thousands of lives.

And what of the final settlement? It's been defined a "N territorial victory:

The present battle line—now from ten to forty miles inside North Korea—will become the permanent truce line if agreement is reached within thirty days on outstanding agenda items. If the agreement is forthcoming the armies will surrender any territory gained in the next month's fighting. If there is no accord the discussions will go on and a new line will be drawn up along the points of battle contact at the time the peace is finally signed.

Ratified by a plenary session of negotiators after lower echelon groups had debated for days the topographical details, the line that will separate the two armies extends from a point south of Katsong on the east coast to the mouth of the Imjin river on the western seaboard. Extending along the length of the twisting line is a neutral corridor two and a half miles deep, which includes Panmunjom, site of the armistice negotiations for the past month but falls by several miles to encompass Katsong, former peace city.

But three multi-pronged problems of the five-point peace agenda remained to be settled. In order of scheduled appearance these are the three questions:

(1) SUPERVISING THE ARMISTICE: Each side distrusts the other and each fears that the other might use the still feece cease fire order bid emanated but reinforcement and re-equipment from Key West, Florida, where with new weapons. To obviate difficulties and to allay suspicions some sort of inspection system is called for. The United Nations Command proposed a joint policing team free to travel anywhere in Korea. The Communist proposal calls for a joint armistice commission responsible for armistice arrangements and supervision. Never ones to tolerate unauthorized nosing in their own backyard, the Communist plan made no mention of inspection behind the lines.

(2) EXCHANGE OF WAR CAPTIVES: In United Nations prison compounds are 168,346 prisoners—148,736 North Koreans and 19,610 Chinese. Just how many U. N. prisoners the enemy is holding is not known since neither North Korea nor Communist China is a member of the Geneva convention on war prisoners, therefore does not report them. Currently missing are 10,871 U. N. troops and 88,380 South Koreans.

At Tuesday's plenary session, when the cease fire line was ratified, Admiral Charles Turner Joy, chief of the United Nations delegates, suggested each side prepare statistics on prisoners to speed that Act, which became law last October. The senior delegate proposed that each side prepare the latest available information on names, nationalities and other identification of all war prisoners and the location of all persons of war camps.

RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE GOVERNMENTS CONCERNED:

Never a clear point, this vaguely worded item results from a U. N. refusal to put on the agenda the withdrawal of troops from Korea. Curtain

The U. N. insists that troop withdrawals form part of a political aspect and have no part in armistice discussions.

all land warfare had ceased and that only the sea and air warfare was still going on. Correspondents reported large fires along the Communist front and complete tranquillity.

It was not clear from where the other might use the still feece cease fire order bid emanated but reinforcement and re-equipment from Key West, Florida, where President Truman, in taking his winter vacation, came a vigorous denial from Presidential Press Secretary Joseph Short. Said he: "There can be no cease fire in Korea until an armistice has been signed."

EAST AND WEST CONTINUE VERBAL CLASH IN U. N.

East and West were still poles apart and no move yet made in the spacious chambers of the Palais de Chaillot, where the sixth session of the United Nations General Assembly is convening, seemed capable of bridging the yawning hiatus of suspicion and tension now so much a part of East-West relationships.

Disarmament was still the number one issue on the business-like agenda and the Big Two (Soviet Russia and the U. S. A.) were no closer to agreement now than they had been at the outset.

But now there was a new point of friction, which Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky raised last week. It concerns a provision and how was it to be fused into each side prepare statistics on prisoners to speed that Act, which became law last October. The provision authorizes the President to spend up to $100 million out of military aid funds "for any selected persons who are residing in or escapees from" Russia and the satellites "either to form such persons into elements of the military force supporting the North Atlantic Treaty organization or for other purposes."

The sponsors of the provision claim that "other purposes" provides an opening for them to aid under-ground forces behind the Iron Curtain

The Russians protested that the Mutual Security Act was designed to finance subversive activities of persons and armed groups (to) finance treason and war are:

At week's end came a blurred criminal who fled from their countries "They brazened the $100

Moscow's cashed out by Presidents and foreign affairs. The American Roosevelt and former Soviet Foreigner certain rights in spreading Minister Maxim Litvinoff in field. The Allies did have the best idea the United States right to intervene and the Allies formally recognized the Soviet come control of the German army in any emergency which could lead to

The pledges were made at the their own position leading to the insistence of Washington which had and make decisions on the future question of West German unity.

The new Allied-Bonn arrangement would await agreement on a European army. That is a multinational army composed of units from France, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Luxembourg.

The uncertainties surrounding the agreement stem from three sources. First of these is the political situation in West Germany where Dr. Adenauer's strength has been weakened by losses in recent by-elections to extreme Rightist parties and especially to the powerful well-disciplined Socialist party of Dr. Kurt Schumacher. The head of the United Nations Geneva, socialist party leader has accused Dr. Adenauer of a "sell-out" to the Allies. He is inflexibly opposed to the European army proposal and insists that Germany rearm as a national equal with the Atlantic Pact countries or refrain from participation.

THE PROBLEM OF WEST GERMANY'S SOVEREIGNTY

Three facts were tangling the issues of West German sovereignty last week, all vitally interlocked and all hinged to a none-too-clear future.

How was the (West) German Federal Republic with its huge Ruhr industries and technical United Nations delegates, last week. It concerns a provision and how was it to be fused into each side prepare statistics on prisoners to speed that Act, which became law last October. The provision authorizes the President to spend up to $100 million out of military aid funds "for any selected persons who are residing in or escapees from" Russia and the satellites "either to form such persons into elements of the military force supporting the North Atlantic Treaty organization or for other purposes."

Last week the Western Big Three Foreign Ministers and the Bonn Government made an approach to solve these problems.

U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman met with Bonn Chancellor Konrad Adenauer in Paris. They approved an agreement which moved Chancellor Adenauer to remark with rhetoric favour: "An historical event which has brought Western Germany forever into the Western camp."

The essentials of the agreement are:

Four occupation will end but

Allied troops will remain on West

GUILTY CROSS

The Colonial tower of San Francisco—the cause of humorous polemics between the Mayor of Santiago and the Prior of the Franciscan Fathers—it has upset local painters. In accordance with an order from the Mayor reconstruction work has begun on the outside walls of the church and tower. Taking advantage of the ascent to the bell towers the Prior ordered that the tilted cross be straightened—the cross is 30 metres above the street and was struck by a strong bolt of lightning during a storm. Local painters have always liked to go into the green gardens of the Order, and from there paint the picturesque tower with ancient tilted cross. But now that they have seen the new position of the cross they have countered with bitter statements: "Now we must remake all our paintings because of the cross".

"The world-famous cancer specialist, Dr. George Pack, who only recently operated on Eva Duarre de Perón in Argentina and several years ago treated the Maharaja of Kapurthala, has arrived in Santiago. He told reporters, "Friday I shall operate in the clinic of Dr. De Amicis. It will be a modest contribution to the success of this Congress of Cancer Specialists."

Simply by answering a question concerning the yearly export of Chilean nitrate, Professor Charles K. Ransom and his wife have won a free trip throughout South America. The fortunate couple arrived yesterday in Santiago. The luck began on a radio program called "Your Tropical Trip". Professor Ransom was called before a jury and asked about the annual exportation of nitrate from Chile. He answered that it was a million tons a year (he had only ten seconds to answer). His answer was closest to the fact: the actual figure is 690,000 tons per year.

Only last year Professor won another radio prize, a trip to Honolulu, on a program called "Earn Your Vacation".

The Ransoms will stay in Santiago about ten days.

TO THE AUTOMOBILE THEFT

who stole my automobile No. B. V. 39 from my home, 751 Dr. Cadiz Street, leaving it abandoned at dawn last Sunday at La Encantada on the corner of Crescento Fráncisco, you are requested to come by the same spot to carry off the rest of the car that you left behind, after removing the wheels, radiator, etc., in order that I may collect my insurance since so long as there is anything left of the vehicle I can collect nothing. The automobile is still where you left it. Your cooperation will be much appreciated.

THE OWNER

Editor's Note: At press-time the automobile mentioned above had not been re-stolen. The owner of the car has been identified by the local press as Gustavo Campana, newspaperman and radio script writer. Señor Campana's insurance contract carried a clause stating that if the automobile reappeared before the end of ninety days no damages could be collected.

One of the advantages we have over most readers of the S. P. M. is that we can see what goes into print before publication and if we feel like commenting can do so at once without waiting for next week's edition. Thus we can acknowledge "Chatter Box's" comment on our column of the week before. We had asked for examples of words which like "inning", have a singular form along with an "s" termination. Chatter Box came up with "series" and it is a good example—the dictionary states clearly that it serves both as singular and plural. Chatter Box also mentions that the headline "STIX NIX CRIX PIX" from "Variety" would produce blank despair on the face of any Englishman that came across it. It would do the same to 99 out of one hundred Americans. Probably ninety percent of those who do grasp the translation live, or have lived, within a one mile radius of Times Square. Although it will be comparable to translation from the Urdu (we used to speak it, but now have forgotten; you know how it is when you don't keep a language up) we shall attempt to clarify the meaning. First of all the strict meaning, in the terse language of Broadway: Stix means sticks, Nix is "says no to", Crix is critics and Pix is pictures. In other words the movie fans who live in the country do not swarm to the box office when a film that has been highly praised by reviewers arrives at the local flicker-house. WALL STREET LAYS AN AGG is, obviously, a reference to the crash of '29. "To lay an egg", when one is not speaking of a bird, means to drop a brick or put your foot in your mouth.

Words are fun, even the serious study of serious words. If you find yourself in the house some rainy afternoon without a game of canasta to fill your time pick up the dictionary and browse through it. The dictionary, etymologically speaking, is a fascinating tome. Take the word shibboleth, for instance. Today it means "password, watchword; a Party slogan." Its original meaning in Hebrew was "ear of corn or stream in flood". Its present usage stems from the time Jephtha used it as a battle-line password to distinguish his men from the fleeing Ephraimites—who could not pronounce it correctly. The same idea is used in today's warfare. English speaking troops often employ words that cannot be pronounced easily by the opposition. The idea even went further in an anecdote published in these pages a few weeks ago. American soldier to unknown: What are the words of "The Star Spangled Banner"? Answer: "Damned if I know them". Soldier: "Advance American soldier, and be recognized."

"Burcombe", also known as bunkum, was the name of a U. S. Congressman who made a pointless speech to impress his constituents. "Chauvinism", the practise of blind patriotism, comes from the name of Chauvin, a soldier who was continually boasting of Napoleon's glory. "Cabal", an intrigue, is a word composed of the initial letters of the names of five English gentlemen who conspired against authority. With these words we have hardly started in an investigation that can be as exciting as reading detective stories. But if the history and use of words is an interesting study, the observation of the mis-use of words is even more fun. We blush to say that we have an Aunt who "blushes" when she is excited and often remarks on the "beautiful revenue of trees" in front of her house. Aldous Huxley once wrote a delightful story about a young man who thought the word "cinnamintive" meant red, or pertaining to that color. Huxley recounts how the fellow bandied the word about in an intellectual manner, and, most of the time got away with it since none of his listeners knew the difference. Actually the word describes a remedy for flatulence. And now we are going to stop before association makes someone think of descriptive words for this twittering.

A few weeks ago I commented that the performances of the Karadura Koncert Kompany, some twenty-five years ago, must have been as corny as their name. One of the organizers of that enterprise, Mr. Bert Gould, has since informed me that they were very good and that furthermore by their efforts were able to raise the sum of one thousand pounds for Earl Haig's Fund. The members of the party were all members of the British Legion and that once more demonstrates my contention that Legion Members of those days were more serious about their membership and the objects of the Legion than the new members of nowadays. To anyone who may feel offended at my comments about the name of the company, I apologize most sincerely, but nevertheless I still consider that the Name, Karadura Koncert Kompany, was a crumbly one. Or should I say "krumbly"?... incidentally, the suggestion put forward by "JOE" last week that the apparent lack of enthusiasm on the part of the new members may be attributed to the fact that there are now more ladies who qualify for membership, and so forth, doesn't convince me very much . . . I recall a dinner at the Country Club, two or three years ago, at which the ladies sang the barrack room ballades of the 1939-1945 affair with quite as much gusto and enthusiasm as the men. And anyone who states that the ladies are not as keen as a party as the men prevaricates, and the truth is not in him . . . Mr. Bert Gould, who has always been active in Legion affairs, and for his service in the Second World War was decorated by the Chilean Government and rewarded handsomely by His Majesty's, is still around and very vital. Now that the election of officers is approaching, I emphatically suggest that the members of the Legion couldn't do better than vote for Mr. Albert C. Gould, M. M., as President. This is not a paid announcement. It's just the expression of a personal opinion, to which anyone is entitled. Mr. Gould may put his medals on back to front, or the wrong way round, when he attends Church Parade, but, as he says, "What the heck! The Sergeant-Major won't be here!"

D. A. P. in his "Hell Box" the other week expressed his confusion at vagaries of the English Language as used by the reporter of a Cricket Match. He needn't feel so upset about it, because I am more than sure that there are many Englishmen who would be as equally puzzled by many of the terms . . . And I can't imagine a greater punishment for any Englishman than to be cast on a desert island with the Sports Section of an American newspaper as a sole companion . . . I have to confess that, even after a residence of some six years in New York, and in spite of the fact that I was a staunch supporter of the Baseball Team formed by the employees of the Bank that had the doubtful honor of choosing me among them, I still am unable to explain the various points of the game . . . Once it was explained to me very carefully by a profound student of the sporting world how Baseball was evolved from cricket, but I can't even recall that interesting point . . . Maybe the fact that the ground on which the team used was attached to Trotter's Brewery in Brooklyn, and the liquid refreshment was good and plentiful has something to do with the fact that I didn't pay as much attention to the game as I should have done . . . As for the word "innings", which bothered D. A. P. so much, I was always under the impression that it was one of those peculiar English words with a plural form, but is really singular. Such as "series". The question is one for a philologist to explain, and if there is one in the audience, now's the time for him to step forward and do his stuff . . . Talking of the difference between English as used in England and the United States one must not overlook that famous weekly of "business Variety" . . . Such routine headlines as STIX AND CRIX and WALL STREET LAYS AN EGG are unusual inspirations but I don't think they will produce anything but blank despair on the face of any Englishman who comes across them . . . Yet the fact remains that there are English people who firmly believe that they can understand fully and will be understood equally in the United States just because they can make sense out of the stories in the Saturday Evening Post and Ladies' Home Journal. It isn't as easy as that believe me!

Charles Norris, a 24-year-old American in Paris was ready for bed when he saw a picture of Princess Margaret in a newspaper. He was so smitten with her beauty he decided to attempt a meeting. The newspaper reported that the Princess was attending a charity ball that night. Norris put on his tuxedo and borrowed 8,000 francs for a ticket to the ball. Making his way through a knot of admirers around Margaret, he offered his hand. He said: "Excuse me, Your Highness, I should like to present myself. I am an American and my name is Chuck Norris." "I am delighted to meet you," the Princess replied. When Norris asked for a dance, however, she told him that she sorry, but was "booked up".

Mike Todd has become the jumping jack of show business. Before he came to Broadway he won and lost several fortunes, and a series of hit shows made him rich again. Then he gammed it away, made another fortune and lost that too. Now he and Lowell Thomas have been devoting their time to the production of tri-dimensional movies. Sir Alexander Korda saw a sample, spread the word that it would revolutionize movie-making and again Todd is riding high, with capital gain offers which can net him several millions. ERSKINE CALDWELL

WHEN Waldo Murdock, whose trade, when he felt like working at it, was rendering creatures, came into the unexpected inheritance, there had been no commanding in Brighton to equal it since the time when, eleven years before, one of the Perkins brothers, with no more forewarning than a stroke of the lightning, ran away in broad daylight with the resident minister's second wife.

As for the townspeople, none of them, not even Aunt Susie Shook who told fortunes by reading tea leaves or coffee grounds if necessary, had ever had the remotest idea that anything in the nature of sudden wealth would fall into Waldo Murdock's scrawny lap, while at the same time, of course, people were quick to say that if he had not been sitting down, as usual, instead of being up and doing, there would have been no lap of his for it to fall into; and certainly Waldo himself, even though he daydreamed about almost everything else under the sun, had never entertained such a farfetched notion in his mind.

Waldo did not even know he had a brother in Australia and, even if he had known it, he would never have imagined that he would be remembered in a will. From Bangor to Burlington, all the Murdocks especially the homeowning branch of the family, were known throughout the entire region north of Boston for their train, which relatives-by-marriage and other outsiders called cussedness, of not acknowledging kinship with one another. And as it was, it was all Waldo could do to force himself, after having cast aside pride of long standing, publicly to admit blood relationship with another Murdock, even if he had lived in Australia, long enough to go to the bank in Waterville and cash the check the lawyer from Portland had handed him.

"Pay no mind to what the people say," he told the clerk in the bank. "There may be others in the State of Maine bearing the name of Murdock, but there's not a single drop of mingling blood that I would own to. I'd sooner claim kinship with my old black cow than I would with a so-called Murdock."

Justine came running to tell her.

of several creases, "I guess it's time of greenbacks. This is the first I've seen since it was last night when I was as excited as she is to get back to the town where she was."

"Mr. Murdock's back!" Justine cried, twisting her fingers. "He'd better be!" Désie said. "If he hadn't got home when he did, he could have just kept on traveling, for all the concern I'd ever have."

"I guess Mr. Murdock has the real money," Justine said, looking over her shoulder. "He looked like he was feeling good about it when we got out of the auto."

Désie leaped to her feet.

"Go on about your tasks, whatever they be, Justine," she said crossly. "It's none of your money if there is any, anyway."

Justine went to the kitchen and watched Waldo come along the path to the side door.

Waldo came in, throwing his hat on the table. He looked at Désie for a moment, cocking his head a little to one side. His coat pocket sagged heavily.

Neither Désie nor Waldo spoke for a while.

Presently Désie walked up to him and held out her hand.

"Guess I'll take charge for the time being, Waldo," she said stiffly. "Hand it over."

Waldo reached into his coat pocket, drawing out a mostly empty bottle and handing it to her. She stepped back, looking at it severely. Thin, without a word, she grabbed the bottle by the neck and slung it with all her might across the room. It struck the wall, shattering into dozens of pieces.

"I might have known it, and I would have, if I had only had the sense God has given most people!" she said, raising her voice. "I've got only myself to blame!"

Waldo reached for a chair.

"Now, there's no call for a human to take on so, Désie," he said. "Everything turned out, from here to there and back again, like it was made to order."

"This is Murdock's house," the woman in red quickly. "A Murdock made it, and a Murdock should spend it."

Désie sat up decisively.

"Well, anyway we'll be sensible," she said calmly. "We won't throw it away on trifles like a lot of people would who I could mention if I had a mind to."

"I've got it all settled, Désie," Waldo told her, smiling as kindly feeling came over him. "Guess we can afford to have a good time now at our age. Maybe we won't be lingering here much longer, which would be a shame if we hadn't taken full advantage of it by the time we went. Wouldn't be no sense in hoarding it only to have to pass it along to somebody else after we are gone."

Désie nodded approvingly, her spirits rising again.

"I've always wanted a fur necklace, Waldo," she said, her face bright with hope.

Désie did not sleep a single wink that night. For an hour after they had gone to bed, she lay silently tense, listening. Waldo did not stir. He lay on his back listening to Désie's labored breathing.

Just before midnight Désie got up as quietly as she possibly could and tiptoed to the foot of the bed where Waldo had laid his pants over the back of a chair. It was dark in the room with the shades drawn, and she took care in feeling her way to the chair. She was trembling nervously when she touched it, and the jerking of her breath had started a pain in her chest. Without losing, any more time she slid her hand into the pants pocket.

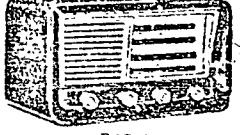

"Get you hand out of my pants, Désie," Waldo said, rising up in bed. "Leave that money be."

Désie dropped the pants without having touched the money, and went back to bed without a word. Neither of them spoke as she lay down again and tried to the storm. It is the Blackie's time.

"Just as dawn was beginning to show the first signs of break of day, Dossie slid easily from the bed and crawled off her hands knees toward the chair. As she was rising up to reach the pants, Waldo sat up erectly.

"Don't want to have to mention again about you putting your hand in my pants pocket," he said. "Leave that money be, Dossie."

Dossie dropped the pants and went to the window. She stood there watching a red dawn break in the east. After a while she began dressing, and as she was leaving the chamber she heard Justine starting a fire in the kitchen stove.

While she and Justine were preparing breakfast, she began to realize how uneasy she really was about the money. She had spent a sleepless night worrying over the wealth, and she was afraid she would not get a chance to spend a single penny of it herself.

"Mrs. Murdock," Justine said, coming and standing beside her.
"Carl and I could get mated right away if we had the money for a chamber suite."

"Let Carl Friend make his own money," Dossie said sharply, turning on the girl. "Me and my husband and have worked hard all our lives for what we possess. It won't hurt Carl Friend to do the same for you, if he wants a family."

"I couldn't sleep much last night for staying awake wondering if you and Mr. Murdock wouldn't want to help me out," Justine said persistently. "Especially because I've worked here for six years without asking favors, and I didn't think you'd miss a little of all that inheritance from Australia."

"Mind your own affairs, Justine!" she said sharply. "Besides, Carl Friend can get the money from his own family if he wants to furnish a house for you. Those Friends have made plenty of profit in roof-tinning in the past."

"They won't help any, Mrs.
Murdock," Justine said sadly.
"And Carl and I don't want to have to wait and wait and wait."

"You don't have to hurry the marriage for any reason, do you?"
Dossie asked suspiciously.

Justine looked at her for several moments her thoughts racing through her mind.

"Not exactly," she admitted at

"Well, then," Dossie said, turning away, "in that case, you can afford to wait."

In turning abruptly she almost walked headlong into Waldo. He had come into the kitchen and wanted to go fishing. Dossie had been digging a hole in the ground and as she turned to him, Waldo reached to push the blade of the spade into the stone earth. She door without a word being spoken.

Dossie watched him leave, wondering what he was about to do. She went to the window and watched as he walked to the tool shed and came out a moment later carrying a spade. With the coffee can in one hand and the spade over his shoulder, he disappeared out of sight behind the barn.

It was not until almost ten minutes had passed that Dossie realized what Waldo was doing behind the barn.

Just as she was opening the door to run out there and observe him from the corner of the barn, Waldo walked into view. He came toward the house, carrying the spade but not the coffee can.

Dossie's heart sank. He had buried the can, and the money with it.
and she had failed to get out there in time to see where the wealth had been hidden. She walked back into the kitchen and placed breakfast on the table.

Waldo came in a few minutes later washed his hands at the pump, and sat down at his place.
He began eating as though nothing out of the ordinary had taken place out behind the barn. Neither she nor Waldo had anything to say to each other during the whole twenty minutes they were at the table. When he finished eating, he got up and put on his hat.

"Have some affairs to attend to in the village," he said shortly.
"Will be away for the forenoon,
the whole of it."

Dossie nodded. She had to grip her hands tightly in order to hide her impatience. She waited until Waldo had got into the car and driven over the hill out of sight, and then she grabbed Justine by the arm and pulled her through the door. Pushing Justine ahead, Dossie ran as fast as she could to the tool shed, where she quickly snatched up two spades, and then hurried toward the back of the barn.

She set Justine to digging right away, while she looked the ground over carefully, hoping to find evidence of a freshly covered hole.
She searched for nearly half an hour without finding a single trace of the hole she was positive Waldo had dug, and after that she went to work, digging method-ically.

After several hours Justine slumped to the ground, completely exhausted. Dossie was tired, too, and the blisters on her hands made digging so painful that she could hardly bear to hold the spade. "Come up on the end, she moved her body closer, causing herself into a front position. Justine had gone out earlier in the evening with Carl Friend and Waldo still had not returned. Dossie felt so tired and lonely that she wanted to cry. Just as she felt tears coming into her eyes, the phone began to ring. She lay motionless, listening to it ring for several minutes hoping all the while that it would stop so she could begin crying.

The phone did not stop, and it sounded as if it never would as long as she lived. She got to her feet, pressing her hands over her ears in order to keep out the sound, and stumbled painfully to the hall. There she sat down in the chair beside the stand and lifted the receiver.

"Hello," she said unsteadily.
"Is this Waldo Murdock's wife?"
a voice boomed.

"Yes," she answered, wondering who it could be.

"Then you'd better bestir yourself and fetch Waldo home where he belongs before it's too late. This is Charles Mason. Waldo is over here at my place, in the east part of town, annoying my household, and if he was Democrat, I'd shoot him myself instead of turning the job over to his wife. I've never in my life seen a man behave like he's doing. I guess it's public knowledge by now, otherwise I wouldn't be repeating it that sudden wealth has gone to his head, but that's still no excuse for the way he's doing."

"What's Waldo doing?" Dossie asked, shouting impulsively into the phone.

"He's befooing Miss Wilson, the schoolteacher who boards at my house, into going away with him. He says he's going to set sail for Australia or somewhere."

"But he can't do that!" Dossie protested.

"That's what any average,
normal, level-minded human being would think, too, but I don't know what's going to stop Waldo
if you don't come and get him right away, because he's already befooed Miss Wilson into going to Boston with him tonight, and starting out again from there the first thing in the morning. He's got Miss Wilson believing everything he says, the lies along with the common truth. Looks like she would be on her guard, knowing she's associating with a newlyrich, but she's too far gone now to listen to reason. Waldo pulls out his wealth every few minutes and waves it in front of her, and the sight of that big roll of greenbacks acts on her just like chloroform."

"If you can, Waldo can't lose it," she said. "I'll be back tomorrow night." She sat and listened to the sound of the phone ringing.

"He surely has," Mrs. Merwick.
It's the biggest roll of money I've seen on a man since the Ogdens cigarettes took over."

Dossie who had risen from the chair until she was almost erect, sat down, hard.

"Let him be!" she said coldly.
"I don't want part or parcel of him. He had me digging in stone ground all day looking for that money in a coffee can and it wasn't there at all. Let the schoolteacher take him. I've had my share and more of suffering, and now I'd be comforted to see somebody else have a goodly portion of it. Sudden wealth will show up a man's true nature every time, and I'm glad I found out the true size and shape of Waldo Murdock's nature before I wasted another single day of my life on him."

"You mean you're not going to try to stop Waldo from going away to the other end of the world with Miss Wilson?"

"No!" Dossie said emphatically.
"Waldo Murdock has a free hand from now on!"

She hung up the receiver. A moment later she slumped broken-ly in the chair. She called Justine several times before remembering that Justine had gone out with Carl Friend.

After that she hurried into her clothes and went back to the phone. She rang up Thornton Blanchard, her lawyer, and told him to come right away. He lived only a few miles distant, and he promised to be there within fifteen minutes.

While waiting for Thornton Blanchard, Dossie paced up and down the hallway, her face grim and determined. Her mind was made up, and she knew the sooner she acted the better she would feel.

After a few more minutes, he drove up to the house and stopped his car in the doorway. Dossie went to the step, holding the door open for him. Thornton Blanchard hurried inside and went directly to the table in the center of the living room.

"Is there something wrong,
Mrs. Murdock?" he asked anxiously.

"There is now, but it won't be much longer," she said, sitting down at the table, "not after I set things right I should have attended to twenty years ago."

Blanchard sat down and opened his brief case, slipping out a pad of ruled yellow writing paper and a pencil. He watched Dossie's face, waiting for her to begin.

GROWING Popularity OF RUGBY League Football

Walter Pilkington

Sports Editor of the "Lancashire Evening Post" and contributor to leading sports publications in Britain

WELVE months ago a French Rugby League team visited Britain and lost by nine points to 14 at Leeds, North of England centre of an area more attached to this offshoot of the rugby game than to Association football. Since then the French converts to the Rugby League code have become international champions. Thus the return visit to Yorkshire by France for a match at Hull against Other Nationalities (comprising ten Australians, two Scots and one New Zealander, all of them players with English Rugby League Clubs) was a recent attractive feature of a crowded programme spiced this winter by the tour of New Zealand Kiwis.

These visits and the French tour of Australasia this year when they broke crowd records nearly everywhere they went have proved the ever growing popularity of the Rugby League professional game.

Enthusiasts for the code are not without hope of inspiring a liking for the game in the United States American National Football League. Sunderland's idea is to encourage the formation of a pioneering team to visit the English centres in the same way that Jean Gallia's Frenchmen first came 17 years ago, learn the game and return to encourage others to take it up. The French learned so well that an international championship which included France was formed in 1935.

AUSTRALIAN TOUR

Although travel tired after playing 22 games with only two defeats in the recent Australian tour the Frenchmen went to New Zealand and lost only one of seven matches. To show how the game is thriving in Australia the Sydney cricket ground was packed, when the third and deciding Test Match was played, by 67,000 spectators. Winning by 35 points to 14, the Frenchmen inflicted a more overwhelming defeat than any suffered by an Australian test team in the long history of Rugby League in that country. The speedy clever Frenchmen taught lessons which will be taken to heart by the selectors in choosing a young team for a return tour of England and France next year. This girding of the globe by a comparatively new game is amazing when one reflects that it was enduring a struggling infancy at

TOC H BIRTHDAY FESTIVAL

This year Toc H Cradock Branch, and Toc H. (Women's Section), Valparaíso, celebrated their Birthday Festival during the weekend November 24th - 25th. The following members from Santiago attended:— Mrs. Dames C. T. Henry, Grace Jones, Isabel Holloway and the Misses Margaret Cater, Sally Fuenzalida, Tatiana Antipaf, Oliveira Bozzo, Jane Plunkett and Margaret Henry.

On Saturday evening there was a short service in the Union Church at which the Rev. Murdoch officiated and Mr. Alfonso played the organ. The girls and two female tellers, from Rev. Edgar Pearson gave a most interesting and appropriate sermon, and specially mentioned the valuable help that Toc H were giving to the Seamen's Mission.

After the Service a delightful cold supper was served in the adjoining hall. The Hon. Commissioner, Mr. David Blair, then welcomed the Santiago members from 3.30 p. m. to 7.30 p. m.

Miss Monica Whitty celebrated her 15th. birthday last Saturday and friends who had come to spend with a most delightful party, the evening with Toc H.

The Orange started their innings equally badly losing 3 wickets for 9 runs and with no one except Shearman, who scored a "shaky" 10 runs, making double figures they were all out for 36, leaving St. Peter's the winners by 23 runs. Naylor and Wilkins bowled unchanged for St. Peter's, the former taking 3 for 18 and Wilkins 7 for 13. In fact it is fair to say that these two boys won the match for their side.

St. Peter's fielding was also only mediocre and several catches were dropped, but undoubtedly the better side won.

The Little Man Of The Chimes

Once upon a time there was a Very Old Lady who lived by herself in a small brown house. She had a rocking chair, a thick storybook, and a clock that chimed. Every day the Very Old Lady sat in her rocking chair beside the window. Slowly she rocked back and forth and read stories from the thick book. There was a story about a white-topped mountain in Japan, one about a gray castle in Spain with a thousand rooms. And one was a story of a golden horse in Africa that could run faster than the wind.

At the end of each hour, as the Very Old Lady read from the thick story book, the clock played its chimes. They were as sweet as the song of a bird in Springtime, as sweet as a babbling brook rippling over the pebbles, as sweet as a baby cooing to its mother.

The Very Old Lady was happy, for she loved the clock and her thick storybook and her rocking chair.

But one day when the Very Old Lady sat reading, the chimes in the clock sounded tired. Every hour, as they rang out, the notes came more slowly. Finally, at six o'clock, the chimes did not ring at all. The only sound from the clock was its soft ticktock.

The Very Old Lady opened the gas door that covered the face of the clock. She took down a key and wound the spring. She tapped the clock very gently. Then she sat down in the rocking chair to wait.

The hands of the clock told the Very Old Lady that it was seven o'clock. But again no chimes sounded. Only the quiet ticktock of the clock could be heard. The Very Old Lady waited for another hour. But at eight o'clock the chimes did not play. At nine the Very Old Lady put away the thick storybook, turned out the light, and went to bed. She thought and thought about the chimes and wondered what could have happened to them. She wondered whether they would ever play again.

The Very Old Lady was almost asleep when she thought she heard a queer sound in the room. It was close to her ear. She sat up in bed and lighted the lamp. She got up and looked in all the corners of the room. There was no one there. She looked behind the door. There was no one there.

"It must have been the wind in the trees," said the Very Old Lady. And she turned out the light and went back to bed.

She closed her eyes. But just as she was drifting to sleep, she thought she heard the queer sound again.

The Very Old Lady sat up in bed and lighted her lamp. She got up and looked in all the corners of the room. There was no one there. She looked under the bed. There was no one there. She looked behind the door. There was no one there.

"It must have been a dog barking outside," said the Very Old Lady. And she turned out her light and went back to bed.

"Don't turn out the light! I can't see," commanded a tiny voice.

The Very Old Lady sat up and lighted the lamp. And there on a post of her bed stood a wee man not taller than the Very Old Lady's thumb. He was wearing a litt'le brown hat, brown trousers, and a jacket as green as the grass in the meadow. On each of his boots glittered a golden buckle.

"My goodness!" exclaimed the Very Old Lady. "Who are you?"

"I'm Chymy," said the wee man. "I play the chimes in your clock."

"But the chimes didn't play tonight," said the Very Old Lady.

"I know!" said Chymy. "I'm tired of playing them. Every hour of every day for years and years I've play'd the chimes. I want a vacation. I want to travel. I want to see tall forests and gray castles and white-topped mountains and blue oceans. I'm going to go places and see all these things!"

The Very Old Lady smiled and nodded her head. "Yes," she said. "They are beautiful. But those things are all many miles away. How will you travel so far?"

"I'm going to walk," replied Chymy. He pointed to his feet. "See my shiny new boots!" he said proudly. "They have thick soles; so they won't wear out."

"But you're so tiny!" exclaimed the Very Old Lady. "You will be stepped on. Dogs will growl at you. You'll soon be hungry and cold and tired if you start out to see all those things."

Chymy's face grew sad.

"Oh, dear!" he said. "I didn't think of that! Perhaps I'd better not go after all. But I can't play the chimes for you when I'm not happy. And I'll never be happy again until I learn all about the beautiful places and things in the world."

The Very Old Lady was silent for a few moments. She was thinking of the chimes that sounded like the song of a bird in Springtime and a babbling brook, and a cooling baby. She was thinking about the wee man who wanted to travel to tall forests and white-topped mountains and blue oceans. At last she spoke.

"I go traveling every day," she said. "Every day I read my thick story book. It tells me about many beautiful places and things in the world. If you will stay and play the chimes in my clock, I will read to you from my book. Then, in imagination, we can travel together all over the world."

And that is just what happened. Every day after that the Very Old Lady sat in her rocking chair by the window, with Chymy perched on her shoulder. The Very Old Lady read to him from the thick storybook. She read about the whitetopped mountain in Japan, the gray castle in Spain with a thousand rooms, and the golden horse in Africa that could run faster than the wind.

After that every home, day after day, Chymy climbed into his home in the clock and rang the chimes—chimes as sweet as the song of a bird in Springtime, as sweet as a babbling brook rippling over pebbles, as sweet as a baby cooing to its mother.

A Christmas Gift For Dad

Your father would rather have a gift you made than the most expensive present you can buy. Here is something you can make that will surely please him. Ask Mother to buy you a small pocket comb. Now lay this on a piece of paper, and trace carefully around it. By drawing another line 1/2 cm outside this line, you have a pattern for a comb case, just a little larger than the comb. Use bright yarn. (Don't forget this pattern, cut two pieces of to leave one end open, so that the felt. (Perhaps Mother has an old comb can slide in.) Tie a small strip of felt around the last tooth. It can be washed and pressed, if of the comb, to make a little handle for pulling the comb from it is dirty.)

Now, stitch the two pieces this case. There. It's all finished, together carefully around the edge, and doesn't it look nice?

AUNT KITTY WISHES MANY HAPPY RETURNS TO FRANCIS REES, MICHAEL COLLELA, PETER FIRMIN, MARGARET CAS- TELAARS LESLIE POLLACK AND DAVID VALDES

AUNT KITTY'S LETTER

Today is the very last day of November, and do you know what that means, children? It means that in only 25 days, old Saint Nicholas will come creeping down the chimney with his pack full of toys. Have you made out your Christmas list, Bonnie? And you, Peter and Michael, it's time to start being very good boys so that Santa will bring you more than a bundle of sticks! And all of you had better start thinking about making presents for your friends and families, because Christmas will soon be here!

The Land Of Story-Books

by Robert Louis Stevenson.

At evening when the lamp is lit,
Around the fire my parents sit,
They sit at home and talk all night,
(sing.)

And do not play at anything.
Now, with my little gun, I crawl
All in the dark along the wall,
And follow round the forest track
Away behind the sofa back.

There, in the night, where none (can spy).
All in my hunter's camp I lie,
And play at books that I have read
Till it is time to go to bed

I see the other far away,
As if in firelit camp they lay,
And I, like to an Indian scout,
Around their party prowled about
So, when my nurse comes in for (me).
Home I return across the sea,
And go to bed with backsprings looks
At my dear land of Story-books

ANTOFAGASTA

THE retiring British Ambassador, Sir Bertrand Jerram, K.C.M.G., arrived at Antofagasta in the M.V. "Sarmiento" on November 13th en route to England. His Excellency was met by the British Consul, Mr. Thomas Bates, O.B.E. As the vessel was to load minerals at Mejillones on the following day, Sir Bertrand accepted the invitation of Mr. L. V. Duff to stay overnight at Antofagasta. This allowed him sufficient time to enjoy a motor run towards the pampa, visit the Auto Club and to call upon the Intendente of the Province.

On re-visiting Antofagasta, the Ambassador took the opportunity to present the Insignia and Warrant of Appointment of membership of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire to the British Vice Consul, Mr. Stuart E. Sword. The presentation ceremony was celebrated at the English Club in the presence of the Dean of the Consular Corps, Don Max de la Fuente Locker, Consul General of Peru; the British Consul, Mr. Thomas Bates, O.B.E., don Ramón Yoma, Presidente of the Chamber of Commerce; Mr. Mansel McMahon, Vice Consul of the United States; and Mr. J. G. Macfarlane, President of the English Club. Among others who were present were the Rev. J. B. D. Cotter, and Messrs. Malcolm E. Sword, E. McLean, P. Williamson, J. R. W. Stanfield, W. R. James, W. Hughes, L. V. Duff, A. P. Sexton, T. J. K. Barber, S. Daere, D. J. Dakin, J. L. Hill, C. F. Ferrand, C. Wood, R. Ferrand, J. W. Balshaw, W. E. Mitchell, G. W. Craig, Captain Wardale of the "Sarmiento" and Captain Rice of the "Salamanca".

"d-eoration to so loyal and long-standing a member of the British Consulate at Antofagasta." Mr. Vice-Consul Sword has been performing valuable duties at this Consulate, of which he has often been in charge, for a great many years, and is a highly respected member of the British community. Stuart Elliot Sword:— I am commanded by His Majesty the King to deliver to you personally, not by way of investiture, but in an official and ceremonious manner, the badge of a Member of the Civil Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire which the King was graciously pleased to confer on the occasion of His Majesty's last Birthday in recognition of your long and valuable services. I am commanded at the same time to hand to you the Grant of Dignity signed by the Queen Mother and bearing His Majesty's sign manual."

Following the ceremony cocktails were served and the health of Mr. Sword was drunk by the assembly.

Punctually as the clock struck noon, the Ambassador was conducted into the room by the Consul and spoke as follows:—"It is with peculiar pleasure that, as my very last act as Ambassador in Chile, I obey His Majesty's command to deliver a

Sir Bertrand Jerram, accompanied by the Consul, proceeded to Mejillones by car at 10.00 a.m. on Wednesday to rejoin the "Sarmiento". His Excellency was attended by Mr. John Hopwood, M.C., and others before bidding farewell to Chilean soil.

to the south of the city of Antofagasta, a suburb, No. 10, located at the Parque Rancho, which had been most kindly conceded for the occasion.

As hotbeds up there they go out every now and then to say it is so, but mere talk they were bluffed with rifle butts before they could say it again.

A rallying call of "Up, Guards, and at 'em" saw all ranks jump to it as they did at Waterloo, "it" being the hospitable Rancho Bar, behind which were ranged the invitingly grinning sappers who had valiantly blazed a way for the advancing sappers. The movement developed into a brisk general action that became further enlivened when a piano, which had been cunningly camouflaged in its dark retreat, was scuttled and commandeered. Relentlessly flogging to the canteen, it was promptly stripped of every removable piece of equipment and clothing by the M.P.s. It threatened to collapse with shell-shock upon being displayed in all its pristine nakedness, but made a startling recovery when copiously lubricated with whatever class of medicine, strictly of a boud nature, that came to the hand of the Sick Birth Attendants. The timely arrival of scouts with a prisoner, Bob Condit* of the American Legion, saved the critical emergency that had arisen from developing into a military disaster. Bob proceeded to do his stuff, and if Santiago Branch failed to hear the responses of the rank and file gathered around the camp fire, it was not the fault of the Antofagasta troops.

So continuous became the roar of barrack-room voices, i.e. a startling feint by enemy skirmishers passed almost unobserved. They wormed their way to the rear, cleared the breach of landmines, and ambushed comrade John Hopwood whom they carried off in triumph to their base at Mejillones, despite the stout resistance he offered, a prisoner —ED.).

(The editors are happy to welcome a new Antofagasta correspondent, Mr. T. Gathering, well-known resident of the Port City. We feel sure that readers will join us in the wish that Mr. Gathering's reports become a weekly feature of these columns —ED.).

Mrs. Ann McVicar and children Ruth and Diana left by air for Buenos Aires on the 1st September, from whence they left by the "Eoint Grange" for New Zealand. They expect to be absent from Punta Arenas for about six months.

We deeply regret to record the death which took place recently in Santiago, of Mrs Kenneth Carr, an old resident of Punta Arenas, and take this opportunity of expressing our sympathy with Mr. Carr in his sad loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wells returned by air to Punta Arenas recently after a holiday in Canada. We understand that in the autumn they will again leave Punta Arenas to take up permanent residence in Canada.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Chilean Navy, Rear Admiral Carlos Torres Heria, recently presented to the British Club a painting of the Cruiser "Chacabuco". The presentation was effected by Rear Admiral Carmona, Chief of the 3rd Naval Division, on behalf of the donor, at an informal Cocktail Party in the Club Room, and the President of the Club, Mr. A. D. King, made a speech in which he asked Admiral Carmona to convey the sincere thanks of the Committee and Members to Admiral Torres for his generous gesture. Among those present at the ceremony was Rear Admiral don Olegario Rivero del Rio who served as a midshipman in the "Chacabuco" in 1901.

On the 14th July a very enjoyable party took place at the Rio Seco Staff House, in aid of the Golf Club. The guests were requested to wear something reminiscent of the "Gay Nineties." Some of the get-ups were extremely clever, and greatly added to the hilarity of the evening. The "Tennis Girl" dancing "Boogie Woogie" with the "Churchwarden" was quite a sight to behold. On the 8th of September a similar party took place at the Staff House, the proceeds this time being divided between the Golf Club and Rio Seco Charities. The guests were asked to wear "Hidden Book Titles," and prizes were given for those who guessed the largest number of titles within a given time. These were won by Miss Leslie Stirling and Mr. L. C. Saunders respectively. Among the cleverest representations were those of Mr. Eric Davies - "The Enemy Within," Miss M. Harper - "Great Expectations," Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Saunders - "We Took to the Woods," Mr. J. Price - "Cheaper by the Dozen," Mr. S. B. Robson - "The Seats of the Mighty," and Mr. E. I. Clifford - "Britannia Meets."

Among those who spent the Diez-y-Ocho holidays in camp were Mr. and Mrs. E. Buchan, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. K. G. MacLean at "Rio Verde," and Mr. and Mrs. J. Price, who were the guests of Mr. E. I. Clifford at Estancia Punta Delgada.

Several Members had an "introduction" at the Golf Club on Diez-y-ochos, those present being Mr. and Mrs. J. McElroy, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. King, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. King, Mr. and Mrs. G. Crew, Mrs. L. Stirling and Mr. F. P. Arthur.

During the winter months fortnightly "shops" were held at the British School, in aid of the Golf Club, the total profit thereon being in excess of $ 10 000 —.

Among those who came in from camp to attend the recent party at Rio Seco were Mr. E. I. Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. K. MacLean, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Davies and Mr. and Mrs. W. Macleay.

Last week a "Lyonair" plane brought nine racehorses to Punta Arenas.

Mrs. Noel Donaldson returned by air recently from a holiday in Cordoba with Mr. and Mrs. K. G. Ross.

Previously mentioned during the day

The sector of the town which has been without telephone service for nearly ten months since the hurricane of November last has now had that somewhat mixed blessing bestowed upon it once again. Mixed is the blessing indeed - on the day our phone was connected we were rubbing our hands in glee and wondering to whom to give the honour of our first call, when we received our first call, which turned out to be... "wrong number." After that the blessed instrument went on strike, and for the next ten days, though it rang on an average of once every ten minutes, we could speak to nobody, not even the exchange. We understand that a representative of Erikssons is now in Punta Arenas, trying to come to an agreement with the local authorities which would enable automatic telephones to be installed, but up to the present nothing definite seems to have been arranged.

A deterioration in the weather has taken place and it continues to recur at intervals with brief periods of sunshine which is badly needed for the crops.

Alcalde don Jerman Saelzer Balde returned from a visit to the Capital where in company with the Parliamentary representative he visited the various Ministerial Departments with promising results.

who attended by a massive audience in spite of inadequate advertisement. His programme included works of Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt and the modern works of Debussy, Ravel and Alende.

On Thursday there was a recital of dances by pupils of Herbert Beckner in the Cervantes Theatre which attracted a large audience of parents, relatives and friends of the pupils.

On Saturday last the engagement of Mr. George Schuler Lopez and Sra. Maria Eugenia Contreras Bertoglio took place in the house of the Contreras Bertoglio family and was celebrated by a large gathering of relatives and friends of the parties concerned.

Proceeds of funds for the construction of the Intendencia Building which will house the Post and Telegraphs, the Corte de Apelaciones and the offices and private dwelling of the Intendencia, have also been made to the extent of Seven Millions which sum will be augmented when the work is advanced.

The 25th anniversary of the Cruz Roja de Hombres, Valdivia Branch, and of the Club Aéreo de Valdivia's 13th anniversary were celebrated during the week. There was also an imposing ceremony in the Plaza on Friday last when the ladies and members of the Cruz Roja de Señoras processed through the principal streets and speeches were made from the bandstand.

On Tuesday last Alfonso Montecinos gave a piano-forte recital in the Cervantes Theatre which

On Sunday afternoon the Nacional F. C. beat the Matallanes F. C. by 2-1 in a closely contested football match in the Municipal Park which was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators.

On the 4th inst. the official inauguration of the new Club House at the Golf Course took place, and the opening ceremony was largely attended. Mr. K. C. Ross, the new President, declared the building open, and then handed to Mr. Jorge Claude a silver ashtray from the Members, as a token of their gratitude for his kindness in designing and overseeing the construction of the new building, at the same time he presented a bouquet to Mrs. Claude.

Opening lead: king of clubs

An attempt to deceive the opponents is unlikely when the facts speak for themselves

South reached the perfectly sound contract of four spades and now that fulfillment would be difficult if he were failed to break which on percentage rated to be the case. West cashed the king and ace of clubs and shifted to the jack of hearts, drawing East's queen and South's ace. Burying his head in the sand, declarer, in ostrich like fashion, proceeded to lead all his trumps but one in the hope that someone would fall into the error of unguarding the hearts so that the king and another heart would establish the fourth card of that suit. This was the height of futility because the cards spoke for themselves and no player out of incarceration could hold onto diamonds and let go hearts.

Declarer would have been better advised to attempt to visualize the adverse holdings and he might have hit upon a scheme to win the hand without resort to chicanery. Declarer should start extracting trumps. When West shows out on the second round, he pulls one more, leaving East with the nine. Declarer cashes the ace of diamonds and then plays the king of hearts. If East ruffs he has nothing but diamonds to return, permitting declarer to dispose of his two losing hearts. If East refuses to ruff, declarer simply plays the three of trumps and four. East is to win with the nine. This is a great gift for the forest diamond return puts an end to the contest.

BEAUTY AND YOU

DO YOU RUN LIFE...
OR DOES IT RUN YOU

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Few of us run our lives. Our lives run us. If we are to lead perfectly kept house, or a home responsible full lives, this has to be so to a certain extent. However, over and over again I am impressed with the fact that few people consciously make choices. Few are firm in their determination to get from life that which has greatest meaning for them. Most persons go along in the usual groove with only a sideways glance at the things they long to accomplish; the things which have always held great interest for them.

We fail to realize that we should have an energy budget just as we have a money budget. We have only so much energy to spend without nervous exhaustion.

We should budget it in order to have time for the realization of some of those dreams and the accomplishment of some purely personal interests.

Women are supposed to run houses but most houses run women to death. In this, as in all activities, you must choose what is really important to you

Is it more important to have a house This leads to fatigue and decrepitude. Charm of atmosphere and a certain amount of order are certainly essential.

Myriad small wastes in energy add up to fatigue. If your kitchen work table is not the correct height for you it will be a handicap. If you stand when you cook that is another. If you put your grocery lists carelessly those mad dashes to the store are tiring and hectic.

You can safely bet that those women you know who accomplish so much and still seem to have time and energy to enjoy life have learned to avoid many such small wastes in their energy budget. You can recoup your energy harder with short periodic ten minute rest periods

INTER-CITY MATCH IN VINA

The Inter-City match played at had Meredith caught at the wicket Villa last week-end was interesting for O. enough to merit a commentary. Then came Manning, and the from R. C. R-G or E. W. Swanton. bowlers heaved a sigh of resignation, but 17 was a welcome stimulus. However, yours truly must suffice. The weather was fine. Lucky Cuban cricketers, as last year's Wisden pointed out, to find this unexceptional.

Wonderful to relate the players were nearly all ready to start, as the secretary had ordained, at 10.30 a. m. sharp. However, nobody seemed to have faith in this coincidence and the game duly started at 11 a. m. Santiago won the toss and chose to bat. One Villa optimist was heard to remark that this was defeatism, choosing to play for a draw. But by lunch-time with Santiago 90 odd for one and Meredith seeing the ball foot-ball size there were some signs of complaisance amongst the Santiago players. Manning had by this time been exasperating the bowlers with his smothering tactics which effectively closed up one end while Meredith made hay. Even so it had not been fast moving and it looked as if the draw prophecy was not without foundation. Jones had made a useful if lucky 26, Meredith was clear of his 50 and Manning was well still there. Manning, incidentally, was using a substitute run getter.

From Villa's point of view, the lunch interval, always a stiff hurdle for the batsmen, worked wonders. It awoke Manning, who spluttered fitfully with a foul like golden-rain fire-works and then went on played-on to Ness. It made Meredith careless and had him bowled by Freestone. Thereafter the score-sheet shows a steady fall of wickets until the end of the innings. Santiago were unlucky to lose Hobsbawm, run out on his own call, who had been shaping up well, but apart from him and Tienken there had been no other serious attempts to stop the rot. Ness had taken 6 wickets for 55 and Freestone 2 for 15 when Stuart's wicket fell caught at the wicket by Fairbrass off Maxwell's season.

There had been two full days of out of 8 overs had been bowling interest and excitement.

Vina del Mar, Nov. 24/25.

Apart from a few muffed catches the fielding had been keen and it was anybody's game. Although on paper it was then to be expected that Villa would be able to put on over 200 in reply and leave Santiago to make up the difference in their 2nd innings.

But the fates in cricket are no respectors of paper probabilities and Villa wickets fell with alarming rapidity. An over-rate Paine played late and outside a fatally straight ball from Tienken. Sutton lost an L. B. W. out to Meredith. Tienken forced Fairbrass into passing a fly-ball to Knowles and Freestone allowed Marshall to knock off his bails. Maxwell and Held were in together after tea and looked as if they might pull the game out of the fire but Maxwell, the safer of the two, played a weak forward stroke to a good length ball from Meredith to be bowled. Then it was Yeomans' turn to be nibbled at. Marshall was all and missing. And Moodie was out to the last ball of the day being caught and bowled off a half-hearted stroke to a ball from Meredith. Reid was still there with 53 but there was Saturday night to come.

On Sunday it was not long before the Villa tail lay down and died and the scores stood at 135 to 140 still a reasonably game.

In their 2nd innings Santiago were off to a bad start when Paine M. P. Hardy, c. Macqueen & show your desire to perform pictures, but not you'll be doing all right. You can see the player is perfectly balanced on his feet and he has that straight left arm in there to guide the club-head down in a wide fell shot.

And his right elbow is under the shaft so that he can pull his hands down toward his right pocket permitting the hip and shoulder pivot to supply the necessary outward swing of the club head so that club-head meets ball from an inside-out swing and pass's slightly across the direction line.

Because of that straight—but not locked—left leg—the hand is going to remain in fixed position throughout the downswing so there will be mechanical precision in the swing and as a result a straight, far-flying ball.

HIGHER VEIN

One day friend Bernard Baruch's friends spoke so often about his love for hunting that Baruch finally invited him to his South Carolina plantation for a turkey shoot. The friend tramped for two days shooting madly, but he failed to hit a single turkey.

Mr. Baruch made no comment. The next morning, however, the friend was ambling along a path near the house when he saw a fat gobbler sitting motionless in a tree. He crept up close fired his blank, and was overjoyed when the turkey fell at his feet. It was only when he picked it up that he noticed a card tied around its neck. The card read, "With the compliments of Bernard Baruch."

"Have you been to any other doctor before coming to me?" asked the grouchy physician.

"No, sir," replied the meek patient. "I went to the druggist."

"You went to a druggist!" exclaimed the doctor. "That shows how much sense some people have. You went to a druggist. And what idiotic advice did he give you?"

"Why, he told me to come and see you," replied the patient.

Two would-be sportsmen from the city decided to rough it for a season and rented a cabin in the North Woods. Neither had done any hunting before, but they were well-supplied with equipment and enthusiasm.

The day of their arrival, Bill, who was particularly eager to get on with the hunting, said to his companion, "You make the fire, Joe. I'll go shoot a bear for dinner."

He had walked only a few hundred feet from the cabin when he saw a large black bear. Taking careful aim, he fired. When the smoke cleared, he saw he had made a direct hit. But the bear was not dead; wounded and enraged, she was charging Bill.

Dropping his gun, the amateur hunter made for the open cabin door, the bear in hot pursuit. Just before he reached the safety of the cabin, however, the hunter tripped and fell. The wounded bear, unable to slow down, went charging right on into the cabin where the hapless Joe was struggling to get a fire started.

Bill rose and brushed himself off. Strolling over to the door, he shouted, "Okay, Joe. You skin that blighter. I'll go get another one."

JOHN HARBOTTOM

(Singed in the Great San Francisco fire)

"For some time I have read and enjoyed your weekly feature which 'Spotlights' various members of the English-speaking community. Interesting reports, but hardly typical. While most of the characters you have written of have lived rich, full lives and experienced everything from flood to famine, the average S. P. M. reader is not this type at all. The average S.P.M. reader is, in fact, as dull as glazed glass. May I describe him for you?

His name is John Hardbottom. He lives in a two-room apartment in Los Leones, not under a flat rock, as one would be led to believe from his appearance. He was educated in a private school and, to the infinite surprise of his parents, won his colours in ping-pong, a sport which he has since given up as too strenuous.

His first sex experience was when he stubbed his toe on a thick volume of Freud, and he has had nothing to do with the subject after this unhappy accident.

He has met his share of disasters. He was in Santiago during the great Chilean earthquake and was in, only seven months after the Hardbottom's carnal virtues. "Great Fire," "Just think". Mr uses the same razor blade half a hundred times and doesn't change his toothbrushes in years. "I understand," he told us, "that they are making the things of nylon these days." He buys his copy of "El Mercurio" from the same boy every morning of the world and the likes for hard-boiled eggs. His customer-seller relationship has grown through the years. "I've had a collection of paper napkins 'borrowed' from hotels. He engages in no special sports, but enjoys a brisk walk around the house of Dura Hardbottom, his spinster sister.

Present plans for Hardbottom include a trip to the country, possibly as far as Melipilla. "Too much hustle and bustle for me in the city," he reports. "It's the pace of life. I've had my share of excitement, now I just want to relax".

That, Dear Editor, is the typical S.P.M. reader, not the glamorous creatures that have been adorning your back cover.

Sincerely,

H. V. S.
Santiago.
